Faculty, Staff, Graduate Students: Engage in an online/face-to-face Winter Book Study featuring author Dr. Thomas Tobin, Universal Design for Learning (UDL) Expert and guest speaker of the UND 2020 Spring Innovative Learning Symposium: Universal Design for Learning in Higher Education to be held March 5.

Aimed at faculty members, faculty-service staff, disability support providers, student-service staff, campus leaders, and graduate students who want to strengthen the engagement, interaction, and performance of all college students, this book includes resources for readers who want to become UDL experts. This book includes advocated: real-world case studies, active-learning techniques, UDL coaching skills, micro-and macro-level UDL-adoption guidance, and use-them-now resources.

We invite all professional staff, faculty and graduate students to register by Friday, January 3rd, 2020; books will be provided. Cohorts will meet four times between January 14 and February 26, 2020 and those from a distance will participate via Zoom. Cohorts will have the opportunity to engage with the other book study groups in a Blackboard community.
